INDUSTRY NEWS

Canal project will open lower Mekong to mid-sized ships

Last update 16:55, Wednesday, 01/09/2010 (GMT+7) ,

VietNamNet Bridge – Sandbars at the lower mouth of the Mekong river prevent ships over 5000 tons from reaching Can Tho and other Delta ports. That will change by 2013, when a $300 million project to widen and deepen 40 kilometers of canals is completed, permitting 20,000 ton vessels to ascend the river.

A thirty year search for the right solution

Pham Anh Tuan, Director of Portcoast, master planner for development of Vietnam's seaport system, told Tuoi Tre that it took 30 years to find the new passage.

In the 1980's, the State often tried to dredge a channel at the river's mouth, but was unable to deepen it to more than five metres. As often as it was dredged, the passage silted up within a few months. At best, 5000 ton ships could enter and leave when tides were at their height.

Work starts on southern hub's second metro line

Builders began work Tuesday on the second of six metro rail lines to run through Ho Chi Minh City.

The new rail line will be built with VND23.7 trillion (US$1.24 billion) worth of official development assistance. The Asian Development Bank and the European Development Bank are among the creditors. The Vietnamese government contributed some $198.9 million to the project.

The 20 km track will connect the Thu Thiem New Urban Area in District 2 with the An Suong Bus Station in Hoc Mon District.

The project managers expect the train, which will run above and below ground, to go into operation some time in 2016.

Builders broke ground on the first track segment in February, 2008. Connecting Ben Thanh in District 1 and Suoi Tien in District 9, the 19.7km line was expected to cost $1 billion. However, this July, city authorities asked the central government to increase the project budget to nearly $2.5 billion, citing inflation.

Under a plan to develop HCMC's traffic and transport infrastructure through 2020, the city will build six metro rail lines covering a total length of 109km. The project is expected to cost $7.5 billion, news website Dan Tri reported.
